RESCUE GANGS AT WORK

Men Employed In Other Mines Organized Into Rescue Parties—Federal Mine Cars Rushed To Scene.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
Butte, June 9.—With 35 known dead and 167 men missing as result of a fire which broke out in Speculator copper mine last night Butte today faced the worst mining disaster in its history. The fire broke out in lower levels of mine late last night starting from a broken power cable that carried electricity to underground pumps. Lower levels of the mine quickly filled with smoke and gas. There were 118 rescue crews working in the mine. The gas spread to the Diamond mine and took further toll of life in that property.

Helmets, mine rescue crews and safety first squads from all mines in Butte undertook to penetrate gas filled workings of Speculator, the Diamond and High Ore Mine in the hopes of finding the missing miners. Officials said that if the 167 missing miners are not found to have made their way to high ore mine workings, they are doomed.

A statement by officials of the North Butte company, issued at noon, gives thirty-six known dead, 167 missing, and 212 saved. The list of missing now includes only those as yet believed to be in the mine.

Butte, Mont., June 9.—One hundred and fifty men are reported dead and no hope was held out for the recovery of the missing men, trapped underground here today by fire in the Speculator mine. Out of 425 men in the mine at the time the fire broke out, more than two thirds were unaccounted for, twenty were discovered.

Official Report
The fire which started on the 2400 foot level spread quickly, cutting off the escape of the men on the recovery level. Rescue parties immediately formed rescue parties and attempted to go down the shaft to other men believed entombed.

Their efforts were fruitless and they could not reach the recovery level until the arrival of Bureau of Mine Safety First cars, which carry gas and smoke proof helmets from Red Lodge, and Colorado Springs.

Account for 213
One hour after the outbreak of the fire, L. D. Frink superintendent, M. D. Connors, foreman, M. D. Brawley general manager of the granite shaft owned by the North Butte company, declared they could account for 213 out of 415 who were in the shaft when the fire started.

John Coffeyman and John Boise were the last two men to be taken from the shaft alive, told how they cheated death by cutting their hose, and sucking the air by turns, until the rescue party arrived. They were on the 2400 foot level at the outbreak of the fire.

Call Rescue Cars
Pittsburg, June 9.—Officers of the bureau of mine safety here today received word from the district at Speculator mine, Rescue car No. 2 which belongs in that district has been called to Billings, Montana, and has been called to the scene at the Colorado mine. The mining interests of Butte are credited with having one of the best rescue organizations in the country and with the assistance of the training crew from federal camp, they were upon to hurry the work of rescue at the mine.

GERMAN AVIATORS KILLED BY SCORE

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
Copenhagen, June 9.—The death notices from German papers indicate a terrible toll the western battle has taken among the German aviators. Scarcely an issue of the Berlin, Hamburg or others papers which circulate among officers, appears, without at least three to eight death notices in the flying corps.

Occasionally there is one noteworthy. One of today's announcements is the death of Lieutenant Shaefer, who was mentioned in dispatches Tuesday for bringing down his third enemy aeroplane. Lieutenant Shaefer gained his distinction in a service which he conducted in Captain Richthofen's and was lately given command of the new fighting squadron on the Flanders front.

WAR TAX ON AUTOS IS PAID BY BUYERS RAISING MILLIONS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
Washington, June 9.—The senate finance committee today adopted Senator La Follette's plan for a tax of one per cent of the original sale price of automobiles to be paid by owners as the basis of a new schedule of taxation in place of the graduated class tax previously agreed upon. The proposed tax on concessionary was wholly abandoned.

The one percent tax on automobiles will raise much less revenue than estimated under the former plan adopted by the committee, which about forty-five million dollars was expected. Reduction of ten percent for each year's use up to fifty percent is provided.

The new automobile tax rate as approved by the committee would be $5 for automobiles costing $500 or less, $7.50 for those costing between $500 and $750, $10 on those from $750 to $1,000, with an additional tax of $5 for every $500 in the cost in excess of $1,000. The committee estimated that from $35,000,000 to $40,000,000 would be taken from $3,000,000 automobile owners.

A new tax on cabarets of one cent for each ten cent or fraction paid for admission, estimated to raise $10,000,000, was adopted by the committee. The tax will be payable by the patrons.

The publishers' and excess profits taxes evolved hastily start with the committee, which adjourned until Monday without a decision. Senator La Follette today opposed a tax of ten percent on publishers' receipts in lieu of profits for postal increase and advertising taxes.

Committee sentiment was said to favor increasing the tax on excess profits at least twenty percent, there by increasing returns from that source between $250,000,000 and $400,000,000.

The next city buying her will be requested to conduct the auction similar to be held here and keep the campaign moving until it has traveled through all parts of the country.

FIGHTING DESPERATE

German Assaults Are Apparently Unavailing Against Formidable Positions of the English and French.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
British headquarters in France, June 9.—With their overwhelming weight of massed guns and in hand-to-hand fighting at some points, the British have beaten off all German counter attacks upon their newly won positions beyond the Meuse river. Prussian and Bavarian troops were driven forward under a storm of fire, poured upon them from advanced positions, and suffered frightfully. As this dispatch is written they had succeeded in recapturing and holding the British position at Kleron Zilleke, which had been pushed well forward of the consolidated main British line.

Beaten back in the center, the Germans apparently have passed toward the flanks of the front on which the British advance. They attempted several times to organize heavy counter attacks in the direction of Varneton, but the British guns upset their plans.

Along Souchez River.
London, June 9.—The British attacked last night south of the Souchez river and entered the German positions on a front of more than two miles, the war office announced. The German line was penetrated to a depth of more than half a mile. Heavy casualties were inflicted on the Germans.

German Attacks Fail.

Germans Attack.
The Germans made a powerful counter-attack last night over nearly a whole front, the war office said. They were repulsed completely, the British maintaining all of the ground captured.

The attack extended north of the front line, and statement says operations were carried in with complete success on a wide front south of Lens, to La Bassée.

Official Statement.
The statement follows: "At 7 p. m. yesterday, after heavy artillery preparations, the enemy launched powerful frontal counter-attacks against the whole of our new front south of Ypres. Our troops to the north of the Ypres-Commines canal, a distance of about six miles."

Berlin Report.
Berlin, June 9.—The British were unable to obtain any advantage in fresh fighting last evening on the banks of the Ypres-Commines canal, and the Douve lowlands, in Belgium, say the official statement issued today by the German war department.

Attack Submarines.

The Emperor's party was unhurt but three army officers near by were killed.

The airmen of the Allies recently made a sensational raid over the German lines with considerable success. It was known that the German Emperor was on a tour of inspection of the western front but it was not learned he was at Ghent until the above dispatch reached London.

Kidnapers Are Closely Guarded by Authorities—Week's Search Ends When Final Clue Is Run Down.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
Springfield, Mo., June 9.—The body of Lloyd Keet, fourteen months old son of J. Holland Keet, wealthy banker, was found in a well on the Crenshaw farm near here today, according to reliable reports.

Paul O'Day, county prosecutor, identified the baby as that of the Keet baby. Fearing possible mob violence, the prisoners held here have been taken hurriedly out of the city.

The body was wrapped in a woman's undershirt, according to a report, and apparently had been in the well for several days. The Crenshaw farm, which is eight miles from here, recently was searched after it had been named in alleged statements given by suspects under arrest here.

An old house there deserted for several years, was said to have been chosen as headquarters by the alleged abduction band, who also planned to kidnap C. A. Clemens, a Springfield jeweler, and a St. Louis munition maker.

The baby was stolen from the Keet family home the night of May 30th. Its parents were at a country club dance here and the baby was left with a nurse and an older son. The abduction was said to have been committed about ten o'clock. Neighbors saw an auto drive by the house rapidly at that hour. It was supposed to have stopped behind some bushes. Three men were believed to have been the abductors.

The information which resulted in finding the body, was obtained by Mannie Simons and Edward Conklin, local business men. With detectives they went to the Crenshaw farm and searched the house and grounds. The house previously had been searched, officials said, but no clues had been found.

DENY TALE OF FIGHTS ON THE SEA

SECRETARY DANIELS SAYS REPORTS THAT ARE CIRCULATED ARE ENTIRELY WITHOUT FOUNDATION.

NO ENGAGEMENT YET

Have Been Told to Terrorize the American People—No American Vessels Are Damaged, No Wounded in Hospitals.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
Washington, June 9.—Persistent and widely circulated false reports of naval battles and disaster to American ships and crews have reached the point where Secretary Daniels has concluded they are the result of an organized conspiracy to alarm and distress the American people. Today the secretary of the navy issued the following statement:

"The country is being poisoned by rumors of battle and disaster, without the slightest foundation in truth. Reports from commandants in naval districts, telegrams from newspapers and letters from individuals have forced me to the conclusion there is an organized conspiracy on foot to alarm and distress people of the United States."

"Among the most persistent of these false reports is one that a naval engagement has taken place between the German fleet and combined fleets of England and the United States, and in this battle sixty English and American ships were sunk or disabled, two of the number being the Pennsylvania and the Texas."

"In elaboration of this falsehood there is the alleged report that the hospital at Annapolis coast naval yards are filled with crippled sailors and marines and the various hospitals at New York City are equally crowded with wounded men. Circumstantiality it is rumored widely that a passenger arriving on one of the Holland-American line steamers stated that his vessel passed through a battle scene, sailing ships were sunk or disabled, the sea was thick with floating bodies. All these outrageous falsities are accompanied by the explanation that the Washington Post has been in a conspiracy with the press to keep the truth from the people."

"No such engagement has taken place. The American fleet has not been in action. No ship has been sunk. There are no wounded sailors or marines in any hospital."

"The declared policy of the navy department is one of absolute openness. No effort will be made to minimize it. The people of the United States are asked to trust in this pledge and to aid in stamping out this campaign of disloyalty."

WEATHER FORECAST.

Partly cloudy to night and Sunday; warmer Sunday.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

I love going to Ellis Island to watch the ships coming in from Europe, and to think that all these weary, sea-sick wanderers are feeling what I felt when America first stretched out her great mother-hand to me! It was heaven. All my life I had heard of America—everybody in our town had friends there or was going there or got money orders from there. The earliest game I played at was selling my toy furniture and setting up in America. All my life America was waiting, beckoning, shining—the place where God would wipe away the tears from off all faces. To think that the same great torch of liberty which threw its light across all the broad seas and lands into my little garret in Russia, shining also for all those other weeping millions of Europe, shining wherever man hunger and are oppressed, shining over the starving villages of Italy and Poland and Galicia, over the ruined farms of Rumania, over the shambles of Russia—Oh, when I look at our Statue of Liberty, I just seem to hear the voice of America crying, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy-laden and I will give you rest!"

This choice tribute to America by Mr. Zankwill, the Russian writer, is worthy of thought at this particular time, when the eyes of all the world are centered on this fair land. Love of country is called patriotism, but the love for this country is peculiar because it inspires the hearts of so many adopted citizens. The Russian writer expresses popular sentiment in his tribute to America.

The old house where we were born, and the old home surroundings where the days of childhood were spent, are sacred spots in memory which are never forgotten, but our love and loyalty centers on the community where our lot is cast, and of which we are a part.

This is true, in a larger sense of the people who come to us from other lands. It is natural and right that the land of their birth should be cherished in memory, but this is their home, voluntarily adopted because of the freedom enjoyed and because of the great opportunities offered to work out a destiny.

The Rev. Lewis, pastor of the Carle Methodist church, related, in his patriotic sermon last Sunday morning, an experience which came to him while traveling in Germany, a few years ago.

He said he was going down the Rhine on one of the big excursion steamers and as they passed the places of historic interest, the band played patriotic airs and the scene was most inspiring.

Across the deck he noticed a man with a little American flag in the lapel of his coat. He stepped across and extending his hand, said:

"Notice that you are an American citizen." "So am I, but I appreciate this morning, as I never did before, what this beautiful river and these historic scenes mean to the native-born citizen, and I have almost wished that I had some German blood in my veins."

"Yes," the man said, "the Rhine is the most beautiful river in the world and these old landmarks are of peculiar interest." Then he continued: "If you will stand here a few minutes I will show you my birthplace," and soon he pointed out the street in the city they were passing, where he was born.

Then he glanced at the little flag and said: "But I am an American! I live in the state of Kansas and the country has been good to me. I like to return to the fatherland now and then but have no desire to remain. America is the land for me." That's the spirit and that's the sentiment expressed by American citizens wherever born.

Back from the northern Mississippi river for half a dozen miles, on the Illinois side, the country is so rough that for many years it was neglected, except for grazing purposes. Today the rough places have been subdued and well improved farms have changed the landscape, and all because of German thrift and economy.

The native sons sought the prairies and level stretches, but the German boy took to the hills where land was cheaper, and laughter at a mistake which seemed unaccountable. So many fertile places in our land have been redeemed by the sturdy sons of soil who have come to us, to find a home, from the lands across the sea. They have contributed just as freely to our industrial life, in shop and factory, and they represent a contented citizenship because the country has been good to them.

We have gone along for more than half a century at peace with ourselves and at peace with all mankind. The long continued era of prosperity has been generously shared by all the people. We have enjoyed the advantages and opportunities of this free land as well as the protection of the best government under the sun. The best, because it is the people's government, and we, the people, help to make it.

For the first time within the memory of the most of us, our nation is at war. The experience is so novel, and the battlefields so distant that it is difficult for us to comprehend the situation, yet it is a cold and stubborn fact, and all the great energies of this peace-loving people are being mobilized for war.

The issues of this gigantic world's struggle can not be too often or too clearly defined, because we are kept out of it so long, and are so reluctant to enter, that we are ignorant of the issues of vital importance. Many people do not yet fully realize why this nation is involved.

We are in the war, not for gain, nor for the acquisition of territory, neither or are we prompted by a spirit of enmity toward any people. We have joined the allies at this critical time, to aid in abolishing German autocracy from the face of the earth and giving to the world the freedom which we enjoy and to which the people of all nations are entitled.

The success of autocracy means the overthrow of freedom, not only in the old world, but in the new. The issue involves a great principle. It will be a fight to the finish and freedom will win, not only because it is right, but because it commands the support of the great rank and file of humanity who love freedom.

We have lived through so many fruitful years as beneficiaries of this great republic, that the obligations which rest upon us to defend and support it, are a little difficult to grasp. We have come to a time in the history of the nation when sacrifice is demanded, and it should be cheerfully rendered without complaint.

It might help us to remember that the people's government has a right to call an army to defend it. It has the right to lay its hands on men for the farms and factories, for the navy yards and munition plants and for every industry which will aid efficiency.

It has the right to impose unusual tax burdens, and to call for unusual service in every field of endeavor. It has the right to go to the masses and ask the people to loan from their savings or earnings a part of the money necessary to carry on the war.

This loan, by the way, is secured by a government bond drawing three and one-half per cent. It is as good as gold, and it should be considered an honor to own one.

The test of love, whether it be love of country or any other love worthy of the name, is sacrifice. The more we do for our country in this hour of need, the more we show appreciation and devotion. We may all do something, for every kind of service is demanded.

THE DUMKUPFFS.

The Dumkuff family was sitting appropriately in the sitting room when suddenly all at once, without warning, as it were, a terrific explosion, apparently from the cellar, shook the windows, rattled the walls, and sent sparks flying from the carpet.

"Well," said Mr. Dumkuff, after he had picked himself up from the floor and placed himself back in his chair, "What on earth could have happened? Do you suppose the man who unloaded the coal last October could have been an anarchist and put some blisse or some nockenite in the coal because he heard I once made a speech praising law and order, do you suppose?"

"Vital on earth could have happened," mused Mrs. Dumkuff, "is it possible that the pickled green snouts I put up last fall could have gone and spontaneous combusted? Perhaps some bird of some sort managed to get into the cellar and lay an egg long, long ago, and the egg got so old it exploded, suggested Grandpa Dumkuff."

At that juncture little Willie Dumkuff came in, all excitement. "I covered the baby with coal oil and put her in the tool chest and threw in a match and quick shut the lid and now I can find the baby anywhere," he explained.

Mr. Dumkuff laughed. "Well, we're all wrong," he exclaimed, and chided Willie for his carelessness and sent him to bed.

WILL PRESENT DESK TO JUSTICE MARSHALL

Madison, Wis., June 9.—The old desk at which he has worked as a supreme court judge for a quarter of a century will probably be given to Justice R. M. Marshall by the legislature. The assembly has passed a resolution giving him the desk at which he has worked in his office in the supreme court. The resolution will be placed in the senate today or Monday and will probably be concurred in.

The desk which is given to Justice Marshall was purchased for Judge Harlow S. Orton years ago. On the death of Chief Justice Orton in 1895, Governor William H. Upham appointed Judge Marshall to the bench and it was at Orton's desk that many of Justice Marshall's most important opinions have been rendered. Judge Orton had a distinguished career at the court. From 1889 to 1874 he was dean of the law faculty of the University and in 1870 he was mayor of Madison, and from 1870 to 1878 practiced law in this city. The desk is a walnut one, quite out of date when compared with the desks now in use at the capitol.

There have been three quite famous desks used by the supreme court of this state. The desk purchased for Justice Marshall is one. A second desk used by Judge David Taylor and presented to his daughter under a resolution passed in 1811. The third desk is one of the most famous old desks in the capitol and is now used by Chief Justice J. B. Winslow. On the front of this desk used by Chief Justice Winslow is a silver plate with the following inscription:

"This desk was used successfully by Chief Justices Dixon, Ryan and Cassidy in their official labors and is preserved by the state as a memorial to those great jurists."

BY RAIL, NEW YORK TO RUSS CAPITAL

Winnipeg, June 9.—A through railway route from the United States to Petrograd by way of Canada.

This ambition of United States capitalists has been outlined in a lengthy report to the Winnipeg Grain Exchange. The scheme has been considered for some time and negotiations with the railways and governments which will be involved in the project will be opened in the near future.

Increased transportation to the westward without running the risk of submarines sinking ships, and assistance in the war for Russia with munitions and food will result if the proposed connection is established.

The plan provides for a standard railway line, connecting United States roads through British Columbia and Alaska with Beijing street and a line from the Siberian coast to the Trans-Siberian railway.

Large ferries would carry freight and passenger cars across the fifty-mile wide strait.

Negotiations have been opened with the Russian government to improve the Trans-Siberian railway with a modern road instead of a primitive street of tracks overburdened by war transportations. The United States commission to Russia will take up that phase of the proposed line with the new Russian government.

One of the undertakings believed that within a few years an international railway will connect New York with Petrograd. They are taking into consideration the possibility of the war lasting several years. The promoters of the project are satisfied that future benefits would justify the vast financial outlay that will be necessary. They declare that a few years of world's peace would make it the most important railway route on earth.

Temperance Talks

[By Temperance Educational League.] A Dangerous Compromise.

One of the incidents in the recent fight for temperance legislation in Wisconsin, was the effort of the governor and friends of the brewery interests to exempt beer from prohibitory laws. Likewise the brewery interests are seeking a similar exemption in the proposed prohibition legislation now before congress. We believe such a course would be unwise and advise against any such compromise. We have before us a statement upon that subject by officials of the Anti-Saloon league which will be of interest to our readers and from which we quote:

"The brewers and wine growers are putting forth tremendous efforts to save the beer and wine traffic from destruction. They are willing to desert the distillers and to sacrifice them utterly if they can save themselves and exempt beer and wine from the proposed war prohibitory law. For prohibitionists to accept any compromise of this nature would be disastrous to the cause of temperance and saloon suppression. Beer is an intoxicating liquor. The British board of control reported that 40 per cent of the cases of drunkenness were caused by beer or stout. Beer drinking decreases the efficiency of the drinker. It produces disease, brutality and drunkenness. Prohibitionists can play no favorites among the different branches of the beverage traffic. We cannot see how any genuine prohibition worker can consider with favor for one moment such a dangerous and vicious compromise."

WHY YOU SHOULD BUY A LIBERTY BOND

And By Your Thrift Insure Your Own Prosperity and Save The United States From Disaster.

LENDING your money to the Government, not contributing or donating it, considered in its relation to individuals, is a practical application of the thrift idea. It is as much a saving as money deposited in a savings bank. It draws interest at three and one-half per cent; it is a safe investment if the government is stable. If the government is not stable then no investment is safe and property rights as well as property values will vanish, as personal safety and the right to the pursuit of happiness will disappear also. There is no better investment than government bonds. Investment in them is the duty of those who cannot enter the army or the navy and is the discharge of a similar obligation although it is not regarded as heroic.

Business Will Be Very Good If The Loan Is Popularly Subscribed.

The factories and mills will be busy on all sorts of government orders. There is a shortage of all kinds of supplies. Labor will be freely employed and the demand for it is likely to be only partly satisfied. The people who should subscribe to the loan will therefore have funds with which to meet the payments. It is the increase in the savings of the people that is going to supply the money with which to fight to a successful conclusion the greatest of all wars.

Take a $50 or a $100 mortgage on the United States and help to keep the flag flying.

Last Week's Question and the Answer

St. John the Divine, is the answer to last week's query, "Who ate a book?" This is described in the tenth chapter, tenth verse, of Revelation:

"And I took the little book out of the angel's hand, and ate it up; and it was in my mouth sweet, and as soon as I had eaten it, my belly was bitter."

He pointed down through the ceaseless rain toward the lower edge of the mesa. There, far below him, were three solid figures. The water in the lake had flooded the slope of the hill, and on that side it was lapping the base of the cliff. The trail had, of course, been covered, and there was no way of progress except by taking advantage of the broken rock at the foot of the cliff, which here and there still stood above the water. It was a place where men could only pass by carefully choosing their way and calculating the distance of the next point toward which to leap. These three were moving like mudmen, splashing through the water, hurrying themselves from rock to rock, falling against the wall, clutching a tree or shrub, slipping into the lake, saving themselves from drowning apparently only by the caprice of complacent fortune, which they were trying to the utmost limit.

One man carried a miter's pick, a spade and a surveyor's range pole, the other another spade and two long stakes which looked like the separate legs of a tripod. The bareheaded man, who had thrown his rubber coat down in the reddish-yellow water, carried a good-sized oilskin bag. He was the most hurried of the three. He ran some distance in front of the others. They noticed how carefully he sought to protect the bag. When he slipped or seemed about to fall, he always thrust it frantically away from the rock with outstretched arm.

What the three men would be at of course no one knew. It was obvious that they were in a desperate hurry and that the thing in the bag must be carefully carried. Naturally the watchers connected the men with the dam builders. They were dressed as the men engaged in such labor would be dressed. The pick, the spades and the "What's in the bag?" asked the woman.

"It carries it as though it might be gold or diamonds," said Winters. Rodney shook his head. Suddenly he divined the reason for the extreme care with which the bag was carried. The men were immediately below the three watchers now. He could make out pretty well what was the size and shape of the objects that bulged the waterproof bag.

"I have it," he shouted. "Dynamite!"

"What for?"

Rodney shook his head again. The man in front was in plain view. He was a tall figure, his face was heavily bearded. From the angle at which they saw him it was impossible to recognize him, nor was he in his frantic progress assuming the usual attitude and bearing of a man under ordinary conditions which sometimes betray him to those who know him well. Nor could Helen Illingworth with her trembling hands focus the glass, which she took from Rodney before the struggling adventurers had passed; and yet there was something in the figure below that made her heart beat faster.

She pressed her hand to the wet garments over her heart and stared. Suddenly Rodney raised his voice and shouted at the very top of it. Winters joined in, and even Helen Illingworth found herself screaming. The three men below were not more than five or six hundred feet away, but evidently they could not possibly hear in that tumult of nature. No voices could carry through any such rain and wind. They were too intent on their paths and on what they had to do to look upward. They rounded the shoulder of the mesa and disappeared in the place at its feet.

The three on the top looked at each other.

"The dam still holds," said Rodney, quite unsuspecting what was in the woman's heart.

Even as he spoke, Helen Illingworth turned away. She ran heavily in her sodden garments along the broken mesa top past the house to the upper edge. There below her were the three men just emerging from the fringe of trees. Rounding the end of the mesa, they had at last struck firmer ground. Helen Illingworth could see them through the pines on the old trail. The going was bad enough, but it was nothing compared to what they had passed over and presently they burst out of the woods and ran along the greasy, well-rounded hogback that divided the valley from the ravine.

The woman had no idea what was toward, what was their purpose. She could only stare and stare at the rapidly moving far-off figure indistinctly in the lead, and the others following after. There Winters joined her.

"Rodney sent me to look after you; he feels that he must stay back and watch the dam for his paper."

"Look," said Helen, pointing far down. The men halted at the very narrowest part of the hogback. They were clustered together. The bag lay on the ground behind them. One man bent over it, evidently opening it. Another man swung the shovel viciously, the third grabbed the pick. Winters had been too far removed from engineering even yet to figure out what was toward. They could only watch and wonder.

higher grade men knew it also. The spillway was entirely inadequate, but it suddenly flashed into his mind, with that consciousness of the hopelessness of the struggle, that perhaps there was another way to discharge the flood. The same idea might have come to any other of the more intelligent of the men from Vandeventer down if they had taken a moment for reflection. If they had not been so frantically, so frightfully engrossed in their present puny but gallant efforts to save the dam, they certainly would have remembered. That the possibility came to Meade rather than to any of the others was perhaps due to the fact that he had noted the situation later and had studied the conditions more recently. Those solitary rambles of his, those careful inspections of the terrain of the valley, had been made long after the original surveys and the results of his observations were still fresh in his mind.

The water was rising so rapidly since the cloudburst and he saw the inevitableness of the failure so clearly that he did not dare to waste time to look up Vandeventer, tell him his plan, and get his permission. Every second was of the utmost value. When the thought came, he acted instantly. He was in the position of the commander of a small force to whom is suddenly presented the bare possibility of wresting victory from defeat by some splendidly daring and unforeseen undertaking. And he was the man to seize such a possibility and make the most of it.

He had endeared himself to some of the men and the respect in which he was held by Vandeventer was shared by the others. When he called two of the most capable of the workmen, a big, burly Irishman and a stout little Italian, to follow him, they did it without a moment's hesitation.

"The rest of you keep on here," he shouted as he left the gang. "Murphy and Funaro, come with me. Keep it up; I think I know a way to help," he yelled back through the rain as he scrambled off the dam up the rocks to the spillway. It was not his fault that they could not hear and could not understand.

The water was rushing through the spillway about knee deep, and the three men plunged forward through it with difficulty in keeping their footing on the broken, rocky bottom. When they reached the other side, Meade shouted above the storm:

"Murphy, bring your pick and shovel; take that iron range-pole, too. Here, Funaro, you take your shovel and these."

As he spoke he ran into the office shack and wrecked a transit tripod, ruthlessly separating the legs from one another by main force and pitting two of them into the little Italian's outstretched arms.

Without a question, both men complied with his directions. In a huge crevice, almost a small cave, in the spur of the mesa which overhung the east end of the dam the explosives were stored. The dynamite was kept in oilskin bags, the detonating caps in waterproof boxes. There were sixteen sticks or cartridges in each bag. Each stick was an inch and a half in diameter and eight inches long. One bagful should be ample. Indeed, if that did not do the work, the attempt would fail.

The men waited while Meade selected a bag of dynamite, a box of detonators, and a package of fuses. It was a crucial rule that dynamite cartridges and detonating caps should never be carried by the same person, because the combination so greatly increased the risk of premature explosion. The fulminate of mercury in the detonators was very volatile, highly explosive and immensely destructive, considering its size. One such cap could blow off a man's hand, or even his head, and in its explosion might detonate the dynamite. Hence the separation when being carried.

Meade decided to take that risk. He knew how perilous was the undertaking, how liable he was in his hurry to fall against the rocks, slippery and half submerged in that pouring rain. He knew what the consequences of such a fall would be. He would center all risks in himself. He thrust the box of detonators in his pocket, the package of fuses inside his flannel shirt, and carried the dynamite bag in his hand. He would need his free hand to, protect himself, so all the tools were carried by the other men.

The little Italian shook his head as he noted these preparations. He happened to be one of the explosive force, those whose duty it was to do the blasting. In his practical way he knew a great deal about the properties and fought together in the dawn of history vied with each other then. Again and again Meade had to order them back. He was keenly sensible of his danger. He knew that if he fell, if the dynamite struck the ground violently, it might explode. He knew that the unstable fulminate of mercury in the detonators might go off at any time—perhaps that was the greater danger—but he never checked his pace or hesitated in a leap or sought an easy way for a second. His soul was rising and his heart was beating as they had never risen or beaten in his life. And the hearts of his men beat with his own.

He knew, of course, if the dam went out the railroad, the bridge, the town, the citizens, the women and children, and everything and everybody would go. If he could save them, his act might be set off against the loss of the International. But whether that were true or not, whatever the consequences to him, he was bound to save them. The weight of every man, the weight of every woman, the weight of every child in the valley, the weight of all the business enterprises of the town, the weight of the great viaduct of steel, the weight of the huge dam itself, was on his shoulders as he ran. He carried the burden lightly, as Atlas might have borne the world with laughter. For, despite his determination and haste, he had in his heart the great joy that comes when men attempt grandly and dare greatly for their fellow-men. If he could only by and by see his hopes justified by success, his happiness would be complete.

HELPFUL HINTS.

Knocks in a motor denote trouble and should be tended to immediately. The simplest knock is due to spark too far advanced. This results in a knock as you try to crowd on all power. If it stops when spark is retarded you will know what the trouble was and so avoid it.

If knock does not disappear when spark is retarded it may be due to glowing carbon. If bluish white smoke comes from muffler or a spark plug is visible, the trouble is in the combustion chamber. The trouble is probably a carbon knock. Run engine with your hand on a 25 cent piece of hydrogen peroxide on auxiliary air valve of carburetor. This will help remedy the trouble.

If the trouble persists it is probably a loose bearing somewhere. This will necessitate taking down the motor in order to fix it, but if neglected it may cause serious damage to the motor.

About 350 men signed their intention of attending summer session so as to hasten their college education. Slightly more than 500 are now seeking positions.

One hundred women students have secured positions through their own efforts and have been awarded badges. Three hundred plan to attend summer session. About 400 others are undecided or are negotiating for positions. Some 450 are still desirous of obtaining work during the summer vacation.

The employment bureau for the securing of summer work for students is being conducted by the university extension division in co-operation with the state council of defense.

Through the machinery that the division already has operating in every part of the state, lists of employers and the kind of help they need are being compiled. Openings in work are published from day to day and students have an opportunity to have a definite job in view before they apply.

HUNDREDS FIND SUMMER WORK FOR VACATION WAR SERVICE.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, Wis., June 9.—That the summer vacation will find practically all of the students of the University of Wisconsin engaged in useful occupations, many of them of the nature of emergency war service, seems evident from the results of the war service census taken last week ago and the employment bureau now being conducted. President Van Hise's desire that there be no summer idlers among Badger students is being amply justified by unusual activity.

Over 500 men and 450 women, who wish to work during the summer, are still available for positions.

Among the men students, about 1,000 have already gone out into military service or food production work and are to receive their "war service

Now on Our Floors
Saxon "Six" Sedan

It's here on our show room floor. In essential features and minor details—in design, in mechanism, in appointments and in equipment it embodies all the best practices developed in enclosed motor car construction. The body, made of metal, is of the all-season Sedan type. Its disappearing windows can be dropped out of sight in an instant on pleasant days. And there's a concealed rear pocket for the side supports. On cold days you simply raise the windows and you are surrounded by closed car privacy and luxury.

The entire interior is upholstered with an uncommonly fine quality of Bedford Whipcord. A dome light sheds its soft lustre throughout the car. The front seats are of the divided Pullman style with pitched cushions to insure complete riding comfort and facilitate the handling of the car. Three people find perfect comfort in the wide rear seat. Arm slings and a foot rail make riding restful. Five wire wheels and standard equipment. Saxon "Six" Sedan is $1250. f. o. b. Detroit.

"ROPE" PERRY NOW
QUITS WANDERING

Pitcher Scott "Rope" Perry, recently acquired by the Braves, may stick this time. He probably will be able to prove to General Stallings that he has the makings of a big league pitcher and will at least last it out until the end of the season.

Perry is possessing Jack Knight pretty closely for the wandering championship of the big leagues. Jack used to get caught in the draft every year, and being bought at least once every six months, and fast several trips around the minor leagues each season. He's quit it now. Perry evidently is bidding for the honors.

Perry did his first bit of traveling when he went from the Wichita Western League club to Louisville, Louisville was so busy trying to win a pennant that Perry was given very little chance to show what he could do. It wasn't long under these conditions until he was headed for Atlanta, and there he was planted until last fall.

Tom O'Hara made a trip down south during the hottest part of last summer. He recommended Perry's purchase for the Cubs and the deal was done. Perry reported this spring, stayed with the Cubs until they got to Chicago and then was shut out to Cincinnati, where he stayed just long enough to get acquainted with Manager Mathewson. Matty wanted to keep Perry; he said as much, but the team limit was on him and he had to do something. Perry was it. He was sent back to Atlanta.

Perry stayed in Atlanta just long enough to get his old apartment straight, and then he was shut out by the Braves. He's headed again toward a big league future.

When Perry was in the Western league he was with a club that stuck to the game of the time in last place, but he was generally acclaimed the best pitcher in that circuit. His failure to flash in his league company probably is due to the same old story of fate that made Jack Knight a star in the minors and just a ball player in the majors.

HERE IS NATIONAL

"Dutch" Reuther, the recruit utility player with the Chicago Cubs, is regarded now as one of the most versatile players to break into the game since George Sisler. Reuther is not only a pinch hitter and all round utility player of all sorts of class but he is a first rate pitcher and may be used occasionally by Manager Fred Mitchell in that capacity.

War, which wiped out England's hope of becoming an athletic center of the United States in international events, has not put a damper on the athletic activities in Scandinavia, which is rapidly becoming the foremost athletic association has been formed by Denmark, Norway and Sweden which will have charge of all athletic affairs of the three countries, both European and American. National new eligibility codes have been formed and challenges to this country will be issued in various times after the war.

Sweden has been particularly active. That country has forced itself into the front ranks of Europe, in track and field sports, and has been striving to learn all it can from the teachings of this country.

American athletes have been hired for Swedish clubs as coaches. American teams, football and basketball, have visited Sweden, and all they had to tell was quickly absorbed. Only war put a stop to the trip of the combined football and basketball aggregation from St. Louis, which was to have given the Swedes an advance course in both soccer and basketball.

Sweden seems determined to excel in sports and has so far succeeded that, even before the war began, it had jumped into the second position among the athletic nations of the world.

ing years of his life, that it is impossible to mix booze and baseball. Therefore, Hack cut out the booze, instead of following the example of Larry McLean, Bugs Raymond and other well-known characters, and at long last, he is out of the game.

Douglas has habits which caused him to be turned loose by a half-dozen minor league clubs. He proved to be a failure in every measure, but he would not buckle down to labor. He preferred the night life. Finally Fred Mitchell, manager of the Cubs, granted him another chance, and he is now in the big show.

INCREASED ACREAGE
FOR SPRING CROPS
THROUGHOUT STATE

Williston, N. D., June 9.—"You should have heard the racket. Every gun on our front let loose at the same time, in the heaviest artillery bombardment the world has ever known. I have no word to describe the noise, but I was mighty thankful that they were our guns. I can imagine the feeling of the German sentries that morning when they saw coming toward them a wall of iron tanks followed by wave after wave of infantry."

Louis Dawson of this city was wounded in the hand during the attack on Vimy Ridge on Easter Sunday, in which he participated as a member of a Canadian regiment. He wrote the foregoing to a friend here from a hospital in England. He adds:

"Everything was with us from the start and we went through them with a rush. The 'Fritz' was taken by surprise completely and his heart was broken by the bombardment. They surrendered in batches. The pass word that day was 'Kamerad' and the countersign both hands pointed to heaven. If ever an army was demoralized the German army was that day, but as usual in this war the enemy was with them, and prevented pursuit. It started to snow heavily in the afternoon. It was muddy enough when we started; by night even cavalry could not get over the ground."

"You should see how the 'Fritz' are after they are taken prisoners. A German soldier in British hands is the luckiest soldier of the day. Considering all things they're treated like princes and well fed and housed. Compared to a soldier's life, they live a life of fattened ease and when they are let go they are practically free. The English part of it that we can't understand."

"You will probably see the pictures of this fight. We passed a moving picture operator grinding away in the middle of it. While he was protected against rifle and machine gun fire, his chances of connecting with one of the German hardware stores were pretty good, and such that no man in his right senses barring a soldier should take. That fellow earned his salary that day."

"Mighty glad I was to exchange the din of battle for this quiet place, but I expect to see lots of it yet in spite of the fact that the United States has declared war. There is a big scrap ahead yet."

The condition of winter wheat, 87 per cent of normal, was reported on June 1. The condition of winter rye is 92 per cent of normal, compared with 79 a year ago. Both winter wheat and rye came through the winter with but little damage from winter killing, except to winter wheat in southeastern Wisconsin. The estimated yield of winter wheat this year is 1,920,000 bushels, compared to 1,539,000 bushels a year ago, and of rye, 7,270,000, compared with 6,075,000 bushels a year ago, both showing a very big increase.

The condition of the hay crop, 84 per cent, is rather low, due largely to the poor condition of the second year meadows, especially in the peat bog half of the state. New seedlings have been planted in many places, and the hay crop is expected to be a good one.

The condition of the clover crop is one of the best in years. The acreage of clover has increased, and the sugar factory at Janesville will be repented. Most of the seed germinated well and the condition of the crop at this time, 92 per cent, is above average.

Field beans are just being planted, and judging from the heavy demand for seed the usual acreage in the state will be greatly increased.

Apples apparently were not injured to any extent by the heavy frost of May 23rd. Fortunately but few apple trees were in full bloom when the frost occurred. Examinations have been made of orchards in many parts of the state, but no serious damage has been found. This is also true of cherries and plums. Cherries are just coming into blossom in Door county, while in Bayfield county the reports indicate that the trees will be in blossom about June 12.

Strawberries have not suffered any serious injury from frost, except in scattered localities. In a number of places examined, some of the early blossoms were frosted, but the percentage of injury was small—not over five or ten per cent.

Crop conditions for Rock county are given as follows, 100 per cent representing normal: Winter wheat, 77; spring wheat, 96; oats, 96; barley, 88; rye, 30; hay, 92; clover, 82; alfalfa, 65; pasture, 81.

Green county crop conditions are given as follows: Spring wheat, 80; winter wheat, 80; oats, 91; barley, 95; rye, 86; hay, 76; clover, 92; alfalfa, 70; pasture, 80.

Jefferson county: Winter wheat, 80; spring wheat, 89; oats, 93; barley, 91; rye, 80; apples, 93; hay, 84; clover, 82; alfalfa, 81; pasture, 79.

Walworth county: Winter wheat, 80; spring wheat, 92; oats, 86; barley, 87; rye, 87; apples, 97; hay, 63; clover, 70; alfalfa, 64; pasture, 69.

This year the ball that Walter Johnson throws seems to gather most of its speed coming back.

If the conditions permit the "old" of the A. A. U. all round championship this summer Smart is going after the title and ought to have the field to himself.

ALAS!
One cries, "If only that might be. If only this would come to pass: How perfect life might seem to me. Had I but these!" And then alas, When every wish is served in turn, The bliss is not without allow, For other benisons we yearn. Alas, there is no perfect Jay!

Had I a yacht, a grand estate, A car, a pair of rubber heels, Then would I smile from soon to late. And how how perfect joyance feels. At least at times I'm thinking so, With yearnings coming to annoy, When all the time I ought to know Alas, there is no perfect Jay!

Why will a mortal creature hope That he can suit his every whim, He ought to con the good he does. The Fates have got the bulge on him; And if he tries to beat the game He'll be a sadder, wiser boy. Though joys are many, just the same, Alas, there is no perfect Jay!

HAPPY THOUGHT.
Get under a grin and you'll soon get over your grouch.

So of course he had to lie again. He phoned his wife that he wouldn't be home till an hour or so and she kept him late. He was worried to see that his wife seemed a bit suspicious. To show her that he was above any small suspicions he determined to be home as early in the evening as possible. It would serve to prove her. He felt indignant. Women are that way, though. Always looking for a chance to suspect. Pretty small stuff.

On the way home not much later he passed Bill's. Old Bill had been laid up two weeks with something or other. Really ought to drop it and say a cheerful word. Evening broken up anyway. Old Bill would think it was thoughtful. Bill's the sort that appreciates little things. "Hasn't had a soul to talk to all day. Bill's a great talker; talks and talks and talks. Do him good, though. Time flies. After we've been here to be going. Wife will be wondering where he's been. Promised her he'd be home ahead yet."

THE influence of a well furnished home is far reaching and lasting

It creates a beneficial atmosphere in which to train and shape youthful tastes and preferences. There will come times in after life when the recollections and impressions of home influences (well chosen furniture being not the least of them) will be beneficially exerted, making for your child's through life.

A sufficiency of good furniture wisely selected, casts an air of refinement over the home, proving an attraction to outsiders, second only to the main attraction, which our artist shows seated at the piano in the above sketch.
